As part of our focus on careers, our children were recently joined by James Holland - author, historian, and broadcaster - to discuss his career path and experiences. James joined us while filming at the Imperial War Museum Duxford and showed us some of the fantastic planes from World War II. He also explained the important process of research before writing or broadcasting.

We have also been learning about food and drink manufacturing, including the important role of flavourists. The children had the opportunity to test their senses across a wide range of flavours, as well as learning all about the science behind the production. To further enhance our focus on reading and writing, we heard from an international copy editor and writer, who shared her passion for language and explained how these attributes can lead to becoming a published author.

We extend our thanks to all our visitors for inspiring our young learners. In the coming days, we will also welcome representatives from the navy and the police force, who will provide further insight into career opportunities.

Red Nose Day – Friday 20th March

Thank you to members of Years 5 and 6 who have planned and led a range of lunchtime games to support our fundraising efforts for Comic Relief. We look forward to sharing the amount raised next week.

In Science this week, Years 5 and 6 have been learning about the components of blood, using a combination of Cheerios, marshmallows, squash and poms poms. This rather unpleasant concoction helped them to understand the role of plasma, red blood cells, white blood cells and platelets.

Well Done Medals

Pippin Class – Motivation – Reggie for his continued hard work in both his reading and writing. Well done Reggie
